

#metoo 2019: How it's Changing our Workplaces

#metoo is having a profound impact on workers and organizations, according to a new poll from The Associated Press-NORC Center for Public Affairs Research and SAP analyzing workplace behaviors and actions over the last two years and in the wake of recent sexual misconduct and diversity issues.

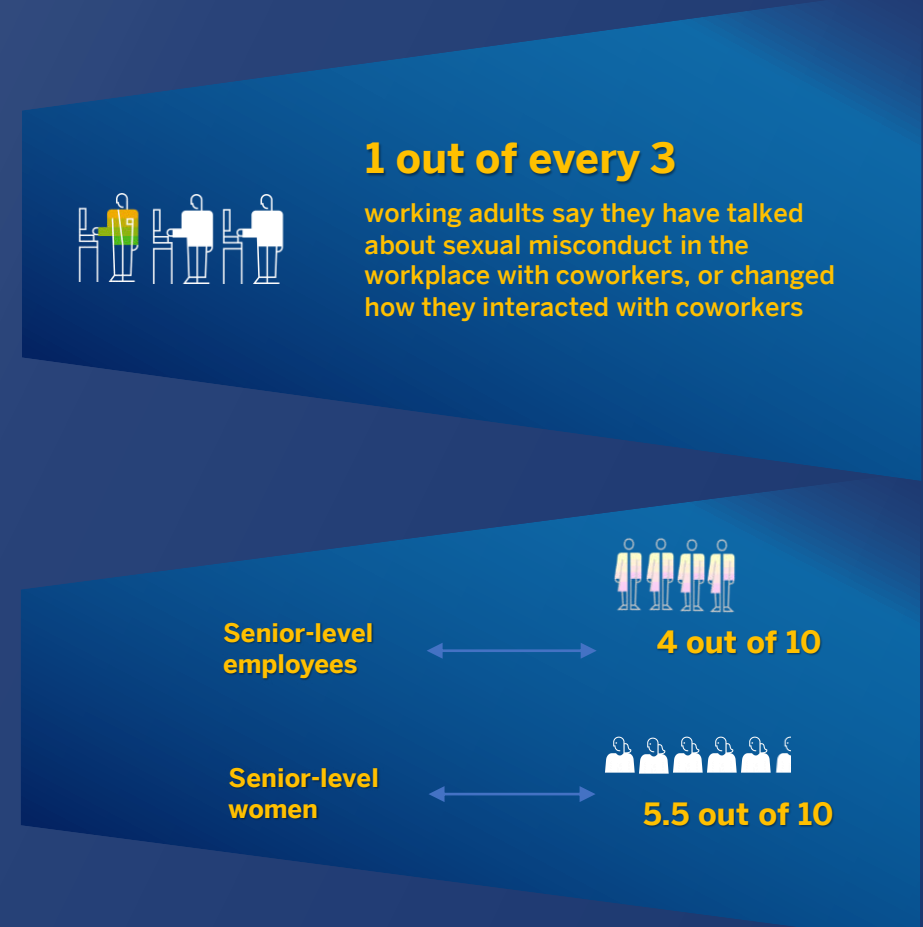

While America workers are split on how they feel about #metoo...

...the movement has undeniably had an impact over the last year on the way people interact at work

Changing your behavior is even more common among:

Change is happening at the company level too

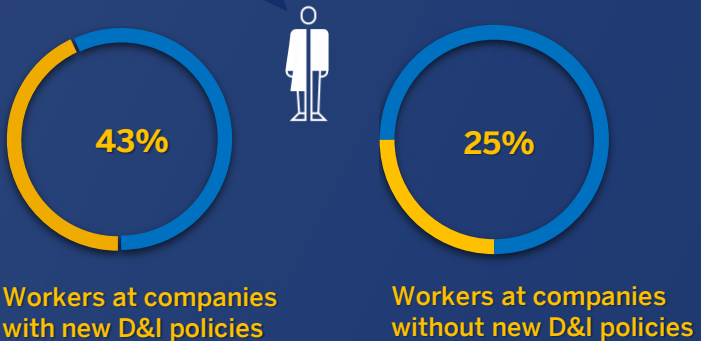

And it's having a positive impact

Workers at companies with new D&I policies are twice as likely to believe that things will change for the better

Workers at companies with new D+I policies are also more likely to have changed their behavior

"I have changed how I interacted with coworkers"

"I have talked about sexual misconduct in the workplace"

